The claim is over

The dispute is a long standing one and the documents relied on by the respondent are all very old ones of which the genuineness cannot be established by direct evidence after this length of time. The Dy Cr has proceeded chiefly on certain presumptions raised in favour of genuineness of documents. If the matter were to be decided on a consideration of evidence as usual in regular Courts, it is not a satisfactory case for the Petr (respondent).

The respondent admits that he and his father did not ever perform the Puja of the temple. The inam is apparently registered in the name of the deity and the inam register probably does not contain the name of either of the claimants.

(The docts referred on by the Dy Cr may all be read to me).
2/3/13

According to the Dy Cr's order even the unproved documents produced do not refer to a date later than 1891. The petition of Gundabhatta to Dy Cr was not presented till 1907 — i.e. till after a lapse of about 16 years.

Does Venkata Narasastri represent deceased Apparaubhatta (whose br Narasimhabhatta has not appeared)?

~~If~~ If it had been proved that the lands & the office were leased at the inception to the deceased Apparaubhatta, the burden of proving his title might ~~well~~ be cast on the defendant. But the alleged lease is not forthcoming, and the copy produced is neither authenticated nor shown to be otherwise admissible. It cannot be taken into account. But there is no proof of a lease

The letters said to have been written by Appannabhatta were not admitted by him; and no proof whatever was given to make out their genuineness — not even a comparison of handwriting.

It is true that in cases before the Munz. Dept, ~~there is no rule that the~~ it is not usual or required by any rule that ~~the~~ rules of evidence & procedure shd be strictly applied. But it would be very risky to rights of Parties if such ~~to~~ evidence as is produced in this case is admitted as sufficient to establish ~~claims after~~ such stale claims.

The Dy Cr's order may be reversed & the Pltff's (Respt's) Claim rejected.

26/8/15

The question how far a gift made by Gundabhat's brother to him can be valid has not been considered by the Dy Cr, but from the conclusion that I have arrived at, it becomes unnecessary to decide.

A short order may be drafted & issued.

Sir,

With reference to your official memorandum No. 2486/Annex. 2 570-09-2 dated 12-4-1910 and subsequent reminder calling for a report with records on the appeal of Venkatachala Bhatta alias Appanah Bhatta of Nagamangala against this office order re the archakship of Ganapathi temple located in Sri Kesava Devaru temple at this place, I have the

the honor to state as follows:-

The karavardar archak of the Ganapathi in question was one Bhagirathamma after the death of her husband. As she had no issue she made over the archakship in question by a deed of gift to her brother Gundabhatta. This Gundabhatta was living at Seringapatam. He leased the jodi lands endowed to the Ganapathi temple in question to one Lakshminarayana Bhatta who also did puja to the [illegible] Ganapathi. This Lak[illegible]

atta was

Rs 10/- to Gundabhatta.

In course of time this

Lakshminarayana Bhatta tried to establish exclusive title over the

pujat-- and a- a Complaint

by Gunda Bhatta this Gundabhatta

was reinstated (vide order from the Amildar pherist no 23). Gunda

Bhatta then leased out the pujahak

to two persons Nanjunda Bhatta

and Kapinipathi Sastri for the same

Consideration as was being paid

by Lakshmi Narayana Bhatta (vide document pherist no: 28-29)

On the death of these two persons -

persons the lease was given to one Vanjinda Bhatta and on his death to the appellant Venkatachalla Bhatta alias Appanna Bhatta.
Several letters were written by this Appanna Bhatta to Gunda Bhatta and after him to Srikantiah his — Son-in-law and then to Venkata Subbiah
the eldest Son of the ~~Son~~ Gunda Bhatta wherefrom it may be learnt that Appanna Bhatta recognised these persons as hakdar pujaris of the Ganapathi.

Several letter papers were produced by Vanjinda the ~~the~~
the younger son of Gunda Bhatta

which all went to show that the pujahak of the Ganapathi belonged to Gunda Bhatta's family.

Thereupon Mr. M. Kantaraj Urs
the then Deputy Commissioner ordered that the pujahak to be restored
to the heirs of Gunda Bhatta.

It is against the above order that Appanna Bhatta had appealed.

It is since learnt that Appanna Bhatta died on 12.8.1912.

Appeal No. of

Appellant	Vs.	Respondent.
Venkatanarayana Shastry nephew of Venkatachala Bhatta alias Appanna - Bhatta (Since deceased)		Nanjunda Bhatta.

Subject.

Archakship of Ganapati shrine located within Sri Kesava Devaru temple at Nagamangala.

Facts of the case.

Within the temple of Sri Kesava Devaru at Nagamangala, there are ~~to~~ two Ganapati shrines which are endowed with a separate land inam of the extent of 2 acres 38 guntas and assessed at Rs.14-0-0 The puja of the shrines is conducted by a smartha archak and the last - Baravardar was Nanja Ninga Bhatta. On his death, his wife Bhagirthamma inherited the puja right and being without issue, she is -- alleged to have transferred the right by a deed of gift to her ~~brothe~~ brother Gunda Bhatta, the father of the respondent Nanjunda Bhatta.

Gunda Bhatta being a resident of Seringapatam the puja at the Ganapati shrine was being conducted by a succession of Archaks the last of whom was Venkatachala Bhatta alias Appanna Bhatta, the ----- original appellant who is since dead.

In 1907, Nanjunda Bhatta, the son of Gunda Bhatta, applied to the Deputy Commissioner for the restoration to him of the temple - lands together with the puja right, as Appanna Bhatta had not been - been paying him the stipulated rent for a series of years. An enquiry was made and the restoration of the office ~~and~~ with its emoluments was ordered by the Deputy Commissioner in his order No.782 dated 29th January 1910. Appanna Bhatta appealed against this order and as he died pending its disposal his nephew Venkatanarayana Shastri was brought on the record as his representative.

The case was heard before Government on 2nd March 1915 -- both the appellant and the respondent being present in person.

Decision.

The dispute is a long standing one and the documents relied on by the respondent are all very old ones of which the genuineness cannot be established by direct evidence after this length of time. The Deputy Commissioner has proceeded chiefly on certain presumption raised in favor of the genuineness of documents, but this is not a satisfactory way of dealing with such a case.

The respondent admits that he and his father did not ever perform the puja of the temple. The inam is registered in the name of the deity and the inam register does not contain the name of either of the ~~the~~ claimants.

According to the Deputy Commissioner's order even the unproved documents ~~&~~ produced ~~them~~ do not refer to a date later than 1891. The petition of Gunda Bhatta to the Deputy Commissioner was not presented till 1907 i.e., till after a lapse of about 16 years.

If it had been proved that the lands and the office were leased at the inception to the deceased Appanna Bhatta, the burden of proving his title might be cast on the defendant. But there is no proof of a lease.

The letters said to have been written by Appanna Bhatta were not admitted by him; and no proof whatever was given to make out

out their genuineness - not even a comparison of handwriting. It would be very risky to rights of parties if such evidence as is produced in this case is admitted as sufficient to establish such stale claims.
